

Crayfish Dissection:

22. Use the diagram(s) you fully fill out to show the remaining parts of the crayfish, labeling the anterior gills and other organs. Label the gills, which are located like structures found underneath the carapace and attached to the pleopods and walking legs. A constant flow of blood to the gills releases carbon dioxide and picks up oxygen.

23. Use the diagram below to locate and identify the organs of the digestive system. Locate the esophagus, proventriculus, intestine, hepatopancreas, stomach, and malpighian tubules. The food is broken into the food stomach, digested in the hepatopancreas, and the undigested material is absorbed from the gut.

24. Use the diagram above to locate and identify the organs of the circulatory system. Locate the dorsal tubular heart. The crayfish has an open circulatory system in which the blood flows from anterior into ostia, or spaces, in tissues. The blood flows to the gills before returning to the heart.

25. Use the same diagram to locate and identify the organs of the excretory system. The blood carries wastes to the green glands, located three organs (one in front of the stomach). The green glands excrete waste through pores at the base of each antenna.

26. Dispose of materials and clean up as directed by your teacher.

Student Lab Worksheet Crayfish Dissection

Read the background information provided to you, the dissection itself, and your textbook to answer the following lab questions.

List the crayfish's correct classification for the following:

Kingdom: _____

Phylum: _____

Subphylum: _____

1. What differences do you see between the cephalothorax and the abdomen?
2. Is the crayfish more vulnerable to its enemies from the dorsal or ventral side? Why?
3. What structures are used for capturing prey and tearing and eating food (not their gut)?
4. Crayfish breathe in their stomach, rather than their mouth. What do you think is the function of their mouth?
5. What advantage comes from the walking legs being attached to the gills?
6. What major organs in your body carry out the same function as the green glands (filtering out waste materials)?
7. Name 3 structures you could have observed if you had removed the exoskeleton of the abdomen.
8. The crayfish usually molts, or sheds its exoskeleton, twice a year. Why does the crayfish "molt" after it molts?
9. Use 3 body systems that you were able to observe today and one organ that you observed for each system.

Please refer to your dissection for the lab to the crayfish at

Observing internal anatomy:

- Thorough procedures for dissection and exploration of internal anatomy.
