

Global Strategic Management Lecture 16 – Failure and Change

Failure in different settings: organisational failure, strategic failure.

Learning Objectives

- Assess potential causes of strategy failure and organisational failure.
- Understand the rationale for strategic change – relationship between failure and change.
- Demonstrate how to approach strategic change – applied social sciences, apply models for str change.

Why Failure?

Examples: Pizza Express, Thomas Cook, Mothercare.

When you only take into account examples that have been a success you may never understand what is really going on (Mangel & Santiago, 1994).

- Strategic management literature concerns high performance and avenues to success!
- Research is relatively silent on the causes of failure.
- Strategy failure does not necessarily mean the death of a company but can be a critical factor in this happening (Finkelstein, 2000), but...
 - Strategic failure can happen on the path to organisational failure, happens earlier and org failure can therefore be avoided if strategic failure is addressed.
- Strategy failure can be addressed...
 - In times of failure it may be imperative for firms to change their strategy! Strategic change!

Organisational Failure

- 'The closure of an initiative to create value that has failed to meet its goals' (Mueller and Shephard, 2014).
- A firm that cannot meet its liabilities or does not meet management objectives (Sharma and Mahajan, 1980).
- Failing organisations are those that will become insolvent unless appropriate management actions are taken to effect a turnaround in their financial performance' (Richardson et al., 1994).
- Worst position for company to be in as often denotes positions of competitive disadvantage, loss-making and poor strategic management.

The course of failure

Once decline is complete, firms are unable to change strategy sufficiently to prevent organisational death...

- Failure is not a one-time event, there are many instances and it comes together in a process that happens over time; many factors can converge.
- Decline in financial performance can be seen and tracked, and on the way downhill in this decline, strategic failure is happening, if it is identifiable, why is failure such a common thing and why do people not routinely address it? Question for today.
