

Nationalism Study Guide

One of the most influential concepts of modern political thought is the idea of the nation. The word nation refers to a type of community that became especially prominent in the 19th century. The time period created a rise in regional rebellions in large empires. This was mostly due to rise of imperialism and the growth of global empires. This small unit is significant in the fact that it disrupts “old war” political thought which focuses on the formation of empires. The thoughts of liberalism begin to rise once again and used to justify the unification of common people of common cultural background. The formation of modern states such as Greece, Germany and Italy wave the flag of nationalism as their motto and justification for unification of their people. Nationalism will eventually spark a world war the Earth has never seen before in it’s history. It will also spawn a hateful form that will take the original political thought of nationalism to another degree and threaten the world a second time in history.

Unit Objectives

- Identify the source of nationalism and how it inspired rebellion in the 19th century.
- Recognize the similarities between nationalistic uprisings of Greece, Germany, Italy and Japan.
- Generalize the unification of Germany and Italy and be able to identify the nationalistic characteristics of the time period.
