HEART CONDUCTION SYSTEM

The heart's conduction system is responsible for generating and conducting electrical impulses that coordinate the heart's pumping action. It consists of the following parts:

- Sinoatrial (SA) Node: Located in the right atrium, it is the natural pacemaker of the heart, initiating each heartbeat.
- Atrioventricular (AV) Node: Located in the right atrium, it delays the electrical impulse to allow the atria to contract and pump blood into the ventricles.
- Bundle of His: A bundle of specialized cardiac muscle cells that carries the electrical impulse from the AV node to the bundle branches.
- Bundle Branches: These branches carry the electrical impulse down the length of the ventricles to the Purkinje fibers.
- Purkinje Fibers: These fibers are located in the inner walls of the ventricles and spread the electrical impulse throughout the ventricular muscle, causing it to contract.

STRUCTURE OF THE HEART

The heart is a muscular organ that pumps blood throughout the body. It is divided into four chambers: the right atrium and right ventricle on the right side, and the left atrium and left ventricle on the left side. The right side of the heart pumps deoxygenated blood to the lungs, and the left side pumps oxygenated blood to the rest of the body.

Major Blood Vessels:

- Superior and Inferior Vena Cava: Carry deoxygenated blood from the upper and lower body to the right atrium.
- Pulmonary Artery: Carries deoxygenated blood from the right ventricle to the lungs.
- Pulmonary Vein: Carries oxygenated blood from the lungs to the left atrium.
- Aorta: Carries oxygenated blood from the left ventricle to the rest of the body.
