Mitchell,2016-06-27 Excerpt from The Fall of Napoleon Vol 2 An Historical Memoir It has pleased historians to describe the parting of Duroc and Napoleon as extremely affecting This is not yet the place to sum up the character of the French Emperor but though we willingly grant that the intimacies contracted amid the toils dangers and vicissitudes of war are more likely to take a firm hold on the feelings which go towards the formation of friendship than any which can arise under other circumstances we are not prepared to allow that Napoleon could entertain a disinterested attachment for any one Nor will the deep affection which historians tell us he evinced on the occasion of Duroc's death tend to alter our opinion because the writers who have described his behaviour differ so widely from each other as to render it very evident that some must have drawn principally from their own imagination We are told that for the rest of the day Napoleon remained in front of his tent surrounded by his Guards who pitied their Emperor as if he had lost one of his children On no other occasion was he observed to be so much exhausted or absorbed by grief as to decline listening to military details or giving military orders About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
